MOTHER ATTENDS TRIAL FOR SON'S MURDER IN WEST

Mrs. Francis Fleming, Fairfield, Called To Vancouver For Murder Trial.

Called 3,000 miles to appear as a witness against the man charged with the murder of her son, Mrs. Francis Flemming, of Fairfield Station, will leave here next Monday morning for Vancouver, Washington.

The trial of Roy Bolen, of Washington, charged with the slaying of Mrs. Flemming's son, Walter, 18, starts in Vancouver on Monday, January 18. Mrs. Flemming's trip to Vancouver will consume five days and nights.

A headless body, positively identified by Washington police as that of Flemming, was taken from the Vancouver river on August 6, last year. Flemming was last seen July 28.

Identity Is Certain

Identification of Flemming was made through his fingerprints, compared with the prints of his fingers taken when he joined the army at Harrisburg, March 18, 1924.

County Detective Charles H. Wilson has been conducting a local investigation into the character, life and habits of Flemming preparatory to the beginning of the murder trial. A picture of Flemming, taken shortly before his enlistment, also was secured by Detective Wilson and forwarded to the Washington police.

Flemming's head has not been recovered, his mother said this afternoon, but with the arrest and trial of Bolen another search for that part of the murdered man's body will be made. Flemming's body had been kept at the city morgue in Vancouver since its recovery from the river, and was buried December 28.

Motive Is Mystery

Although the motive for the killing of Flemming is not known, the trial will probably bring it to light. The former Adams countian disappeared from a farm on which he had been working, and it was thought that he had been killed by a fellow-worker. The killing took place after several mysterious fires had destroyed several buildings on the farm on which Flemming, and Bolen, indicted as his slayer, worked.

Mrs. Flemming has been subpoenaed as a witness for the Commonwealth at the trial of Bolen. Ordinarily, the Commonwealth pays all of a witness' expenses in appearing for a trial, but in Mrs. Flemming's case the state of Washington is paying only half of her expenses incurred in crossing the continent, probably the longest journey taken by any resident of Adams county to appear as a witness at a trial.

534 SILOS IN ADAMS COUNTY

Fifteen Per Cent of Farms in County Have Silos, According to Agricultural Report.

The silo population of Pennsylvania continues its rapid increase of the decade, according to estimates, based upon county reports, made by the State Department of Agriculture. A year ago it was estimated that 55,143 farms or about 27 per cent were equipped with one or more silos. On December 1, 1925, the estimates indicated an increase to 60,618 or about 30 per cent of all the farms.

Adams county is listed as having 534 silos or fifteen per cent of the number of farms.

"Dairymen and beef cattle feeders are turning to the silo more and more in an effort to reduce feed bills and make the most use of home-grown products," states John M. McKee, Deputy Secretary of Agriculture. "The silo is so generally used today that the large dairyman or cattle feeder who does not have at least one is the exception. Not many years ago, the farmer who put up 'that tubelike structure' at the end of his barn and started 'canning' corn was the main topic of conversation among the village storebox council. Dire results were even predicted. Time has changed the attitude entirely and today the increasing popularity of the silo is just one evidence of the greater efficiency of agricultural production in Pennsylvania. The same progress as evidenced by the silo can be traced to many other features of present-day farm equipment."

Franklin county has 814 silos while York county boasts of 3,476.

Chimney Fire At John Becker Home

Fire in the chimney of the home of John Becker, West Middle street, this morning, gave firemen considerable trouble before it was extinguished. Of the numerous chimney fires this winter, the one this morning was the first in which fire was actually spouting from the chimney. The damage was slight. Three trucks were manned and driven out of the engine house in less than one minute and a half.

SEMINARY GRAD OBSERVES 20TH YEAR AS PASTOR

Dr. Singmaster Participates In Observance At Harrisburg; Receives Gifts.

The Rev. Dr. S. Winfield Herman, graduate of Gettysburg College and Seminary, was showered with greetings, congratulations, best wishes, flowers and gifts by members of his congregation and friends, at the observance of the twentieth anniversary of his pastorate at Zion Lutheran church, Harrisburg, Wednesday evening.

One of the gifts was a certificate of patron membership in Andhra Christian College, India, amounting to $1000, presented by the congregation of the church. Andhra College is the only Christian college in that section of India that has a population of 30,000,000, Doctor Herman said.

Children Bring Flowers

The children of the Sunday school, from the tiny tots in the beginners' department, brought flowers and greetings. Janet Baumgardner represented the beginners; Mae Thomas, the primary; George Keet, the junior, and Miss Alice Hart, the intermediate.

Dr. J. A. Singmaster, of the Gettysburg Theological Seminary, brought greetings from Doctor Herman's college, and spoke of Doctor Herman as one of "his boys." Doctor Singmaster had installed Doctor Herman in his new pastorate at Zion Lutheran twenty years ago.

The Rev. R. L. Meisenhelder, pastor of Trinity Lutheran church, told of the days when he and Doctor Herman were boys together "over in York county," and Dr. Ellis N. Kremer, pastor of Salem Reformed church, spoke of the many years he and Doctor Herman had worked together as pastors of the two oldest churches in the city—"Old Salem and Old Zion."

The Rev. E. Martin Grove, pastor of Bethlehem Lutheran church and president of the Lutheran Ministerial Association of Harrisburg and vicinity, brought greetings and congratulations in behalf of the other Lutheran ministers and of the Bethlehem congregation.

William H. Earnest, member of the state senate, spoke in behalf of the vestry and the congregation of Zion Lutheran. Caroll Keller, chairman of the program committee, presented some of the oldest members of the congrgation to the pastor and to those present as pioneers of Old Zion. They were Mrs. Chadwick, who has attended services in Zion church for seventy-five years; Miss Julia Bishop, a teacher in the Sabbath school for sixty-three years; Philip German, an officer in the Sunday school for fifty-five years, and Alexander Scott, a worker in Zion for seventy years.

Musical Program

Mrs. Margaret Charles Hull sang a group of songs, accompanied by Mrs. Martha Snavely Fager with a violin obligato by Victor Hausknecht. Mr. Hausknecht played several violin selections accompanied by William E. Bretz, and Mrs. Fager played two piano solos for the musical part of the program.

Doctor Singmaster offered prayer and pronounced the benediction.

The reception was given under the auspices of the men of Zion Brotherhood of Zion church. Floor lamps, palms, flowers and large easy chairs gave the platform of the room a cozy appearance. Refreshments were served.

17,156 FOREST TREES PLANTED IN COUNTY, 1925

State Plants More Than Nine Million, According To Recent Survey.

Figures compiled by the Department of Forests and Waters show that a total of 9,181,108 forest trees were planted in Pennsylvania in 1925. This is the largest number of trees that have been set out during any year since the Department began to plant trees on the State Forests and distribute them to private planters throughout the state.

In Adams county, eleven tree planters set out 17,156 forest trees, and in Franklin county, 40 owners of forest land planted a total of 54,236 forest trees. Clearfield county stands first among the 67 counties of the state with a total of 731,715 trees. Cambria comes second with 537,300 trees, and Indiana comes third with 435,745 trees. Berks county again leads in the number of tree planters, for during 1925 100 different tree planters set out a total of 356,905 trees. Cambria county is a close second with 96 landowners who planted forest trees.

35 Million In 36 Years

In addition to the trees planted by the 2,156 private forest tree planters, a total of 362,100 trees were set out on the State Forests. This makes a total of 35,693,759 forest trees that have been planted on the State Forests since 1899, when the first forest tree plantation was established in Pennsylvania. Many of the trees in the older plantations on the State Forests are now rapidly approaching timber size. It will not be many years until they will produce large quantities of choice lumber.

Secretary Stuart is pleased with the progress that forest tree planting is making in Pennsylvania. The Department of Forests and Waters is putting forth special efforts to enlarge the nurseries so that the tree

Aged Southern Veteran Who Fought Here Rescued From Starvation and Certain Death; Cotton Colony Fails

Henry Allen Rowell, 78-year-old white-bearded soldier of fortune, who fought for the cause of the Confederacy here in 1863, returned from South America Wednesday with a tale of suffering and hardship experienced by a small group of Californians, who left San Francisco in 1923 to establish a colony in Peru.

Only eleven members of a colony of fifty-two, which set out in 1923 to grow cotton in the wilderness 450 miles north of Callao, remain, Rowell said. He was picked up, penniless and in rags and suffering from a broken ankle, by the master of a Standard Oil river boat.

The skipper took Rowell's cotton crop to Iquitas, 800 miles above the settlement on the Pachitea river, where it realized $250, most of which was spent for the passage to New York.

Rowell told how forty of the settlers, disappointed and disillusioned, and some of them starving, had left the colony after a few weeks and disappeared down the river on a raft. He said he never heard from them again.

The eleven Rowell left behind are tormented day and night by gnats, and are subsisting on bananas and monkey meat.

Rowell has been roaming since he was 14. He was with the Confederate Army in the battle here and was at Promontory, Utah, when Leland Stanford drove the first spike in the Central Pacific Railway System. He said he was planning to return to California to visit his sister and nephew. But the adventurous urge, he said, would probably "get" him again.

"I may not stay," he said. "I have heard a lot about the Argentine, and it may be worth investigating."

COUNTY TO PAY COST OF STATE POLICE STATION

Act of 1923 Authorizes Commissioners To Sanction Certain Accounts.

District Attorney John P. Butt, proceeding under an act of the 1923 assembly, which authorizes the county to pay expenses incidental to the conduct of criminal investigations under the prosecuting attorney, today said Adams county will pay the $165 estimated minor expenses for the maintenance of the local substation of the state police.

About a month ago, after orders had been received to move the local substation, a meeting of local business men was held at which a discussion of how the financing of the local station could be handled. It was stated at the meeting that incidental expenses of the substation, not including rent of quarters, would amount to between $13 and $14 a month.

C. of C. Helps to Pay

By agreement, the Chamber of Commerce paid the incidental expenses of the local substation for November. The borough has been paying the rent for the state police quarters in the Topper building, Baltimore street, and council, it is expected, will continue to bear that part of the cost of the local substation in the future.

District Attorney Butt this morning said he had taken the matter of having the county pay the incidental expenses of the state police with the county commissioners, but, under advice of counsel, the commissioners had refused to bear the cost, unless the court first approved the bills, or there was an act of assembly empowering them to pay such demands.

Similar Bills

Under the act of 1923, District Attorney Butt found authority empowering the county to bear the cost of expenses incidental to the conduct of criminal investigations, under the prosecuting attorney. With such authority, Mr. Butt this week presented his first order to the court for approval. The order was approved, certified to the commissioners and this morning the county treasurer drew checks for the payment of stable rent and telephones, totaling in the neighborhood of $13, for December.

The prosecuting attorney said he will present similar bills to the court at the end of each month, and that, by this arrangement, the incidental expenses of the local detail of state police will be cared for from month to month. The order for the incidental expenses can be presented to Judge McPherson either in open court or in chambers, the district attorney stated.

4 SPRUCE TREES COST HIM $100

A fine of $100 was imposed upon A. H. Shields, of Gettysburg, following a hearing before Magistrate A. S. Stover, Chambersburg, at which Shields pleaded guilty to removing four spruce trees from the state forest preserve at Mont Alto.

State forest department officials said Shields' case was the first of its kind in Pennsylvania in which state and not private land was involved.

According to Shields' version of the affair, given here, a stranger, to whom he had expressed a desire for some of the spruces had placed the small trees in his automobile while he was hunting in the mountains. He had not offered nor given the stranger anything for the trees. On his way to Gettysburg, a forest warden stopped him. Efforts of Shields to locate the stranger who, he says, placed the trees in his car have been futile, although he spent several days in the mountains for that purpose.

PRAYER SERVICE WELL ATTENDED

Presbyterian Church Well Filled To Hear Rev. C. C. Cole Speak on "The Remedy of Sin."

The week of prayer services is showing an increasing interest and attendance. The Presbyterian church was well filled Wednesday evening except for the very front seats. The service was made the more enjoyable by special music from the Methodist choir. The message, "The Remedy for Sin," was ably presented by Rev. Mr. Cole of the Methodist church.

After showing the inadequacy of all other remedies such as reformation, legislation, prohibition, isolation and segregation Mr. Cole eloquently presented Jesus Christ as the only remedy for sin in the world or in the life of men and urged the acceptance of Him. "It is only that the Jesus Christ life is lived over in us and we allow Him to live and work through us that the world will be brought to the feet of the Saviour," said Rev. Cole.

The message this evening is "The Gospel For All of Life.' Special music will be rendered by a different church choir. The W. C. T. U. will meet at 7:00 p. m. to precede the regular service by a half hour of prayer, in the lecture room. The regular service will begin at 7:30 o'clock. The last of the services will be held Friday evening with the theme, "The Gospel for Every Life."

Lloyd George's Daughter Is Ill

Megan Lloyd George, daughter of David Lloyd George, England's war premier, and his favorite, who accompanied him to Gettysburg two years ago, and who is known to those who associated with her on that occasion as a fine type of English girlhood, is to undergo an operation for appendicitis today at her father's residence, Cheyne Walk, Chelsea, according to reports from London. Miss Lloyd George has been ill for a week.

Mr. Lloyd George, who has been on a vacation in Italy, is hastening to London, and will reach home tomorrow. Megan was his constant companion on his political campaigns, and accompanied him on his visit to the United States in October, 1923. Lord Dawson, of Penn, physician in ordinary to the King, is attending the patient.

50,000 BBLS. APPLES SENT ABROAD, 1925

Adams Sends Large Quantity of Apples to Europe, New Survey Shows.

Fifty thousand barrels of apples, chiefly the York Imperial variety, were sent abroad from Adams county in 1925, according to a conservative estimate by A. E. Rice, Biglerville, one of the largest exporters in the state. Mr. Rice said, the demand for York Imperials in London and on the continent is so great that the price of that particular variety surpasses any other, either at home or abroad.

Mr. Rice today denied reports that a general embargo on American apples was to be placed by British import officials as a result of the arsenic spray used here. British authorities have indicated their intention of seizing and destroying any American growers' apples thought to be dangerous to health by reason of having been sprayed with arsenic solution.

Danger Is Passed

But Mr. Rice today made public the latest bulletin on this subject from the International Apple Shippers' Association, of which he is a member, stating that "all danger of a general embargo on American apples as a result of arsenic spray had passed," although shippers in this country were advised to closely watch apples to guard against condemnations in England.

According to Mr. Rice, some apples from Adams county probably went abroad last fall with a blue-gray chemical deposit on the skin, which was found to contain a small quantity of arsenic, and two retail dealers in London were recently prosecuted for selling American apples with such covering on the skins.

The reason for the arsenic coating on the fruit, according to Mr. Rice, was the fact that some apples were sprayed not long before they were picked and before sufficient rains had fallen to wash some of the spray from the fruit.

Spraying Not Dangerous

The amount of arsenic found on apples in London markets was smaller than is prescribed as a medicinal dose by the British authorities, and the danger to the public was held to be infinitesimal, yet 'its mere presence on the fruit causes a good deal of harm in the public mind and a campaign may be organized to prevent fruit growers using poisonous sprays," according to reports from England.

The London Times stated that a considerable number of English orchards had been sprayed last year with arsenic solution, "with the result that the apples in every case were found to be perfectly safe," when examined for arsenic impurities by the ministry of agriculture.

FIREMEN'S FAIR NETS $1200 SUM

$1257.71 Received at Firemen's Fair at McSherrystown; New Fire Engine House Planned.

At a meeting of the McSherrystown fire company, Wednesday evening, a report of the committee in charge of the firemen's fair held last month showed net receipts of $1257.71, of which $120 was placed in the company's building fund.

With the $1200 impetus given the building fund as a result of the recent fair, the company is one step nearer the erection of a new fire engine house or considerable improvement to the present building. The company's building fund now totals $3337.41, the result of less than two years' effort on the part of the McSherrystown volunteer fire department.

Next Wednesday evening a special meeting of the company will be held to decide the location for a new engine house or improvement of the present building. A lot for a new building has been offered the company by Harry Wagaman, and consideration of Mr. Wagaman's offer will be one of the features of next week's meeting.

The McSherrystown company is equipped with an American LaFrance combination pumper and chemical apparatus, and is one of the most active fire departments in the county.

The report had its origin in Vienna where a newspaper says that the leader of the Hungarian Facisti, Julius Gombos, was some fifty odd miles southeast of Budapest gathering together men for a march on the capital within two or three days.

Charwomen Reject $56 A Month; Say It Is Less Than $10 A Week

One Hundred And Six In Broadway Building Unable To Figure Out Increase And Go On Strike—Want Old Pay Back Or Will Not Work.

New York, Jan. 7.—A problem in mathematics, such as might baffle children in the kindergarten and first grade, resulted in most of the officers in the thirty-two story building at No. 61 Broadway going uncleaned Tuesday night.

One hundred and twelve charwomen are employed there from 4 a. m. to 8 a. m. Until last month they were paid $10 a week, but under a new arrangement they are now being paid $56 a month on a semi-monthly basis.

Being Cheated, They Said

Early yesterday morning the ghost walked and each woman received $28. They stood around for a while, looking blankly at the contents of their pay envelopes. Then one of them spoke up.

"We're being cheated," she said. "There were sixteen days in the past half month. We should be paid for one day more."

This view was concurred in by all but six of the other women. These declared they were getting more money under the new system. But the other women refused to listen. Twenty of the twenty-four porters joined the mutinous charwomen when they announced they wouldn't work unless they received their full pay.

Want Their $10 or No Work

Walter Price, superintendent, telephoned the police for assistance, but the charwomen remained peaceful.

They delivered their ultimatum Wednesday:

"We don't want to be paid $28 semi-monthly, we want our $10 every week, otherwise we won't come back to work."

Mr. Price, after trying to convince them they were getting more money, sent them home with the warning that if they failed to report today he would get other help.

2 Extra Holidays Slated For 1926

Perusal of the calendar shows that the year 1926 brings two extra holidays for governmental employes and for those of firms which observe all legal holidays. During the year five double holidays will occur.

Both Memorial Day and Independence Day fall on Sunday so that, under Pennsylvania law, the Monday following each becomes a legal holiday. This accounts for the two extra vacation periods.

This year Washington's Birthday comes on Monday while Labor Day is fixed as the first Monday in September and Christmas falls on Saturday. As each of these holidays either follows or precedes a Sunday, they, together with Memorial and Independence Days, make up the five double holidays.

In addition to these holidays, several others are fixed by statute. They include Lincoln's Birthday, Good Friday, Columbus Day, Armistice Day, Election Day, Thanksgiving and New Year's.

Question Right Of R. R. To Quit Rails For Public Roads

Demand for consideration, in connection with the Reading Company's motor coach application, as the fundamental principle, of the right of a railroad to leave its rails to operate transpoprtation service on the highways, was made before the public service commission yesterday.

The Pennsylvania Street Railways Association, appearing at yesterday's hearing of the Reading's petition for the right to suppplement its steam road service with motor coaches in Schuylkill, Dauphin and Northumberland counties, urged a trolley-railroad conference to work out an agreement upon this important point.

Shepherd Fights For Huge Fortune

Chicago, Jan. 7.—William D. Shepherd, acquitted of a charge of murdering his youthful millionaire ward, William Nelson McClintock, began Wednesday his fight in circuit court to gain possession of McClintock's $1,000,000 estate [illegible] Shepherd.

The probate [illegible] refused to accept the will on the ground that there was a presumption of undue influence on the testator by Shepherd, who drew up the will. Miss Isabelle Pope, McClintock's fiancee, who was given an $8,000 annuity, and eight relatives of McClintock are contesting the case. Shepherd seeks to have the probate court order set aside.

Letter To Girl Provides No Clue To Boy's Suicide

The contents of a letter addressed to Miss Edna Gebhardt, a student at the State Normal School at Towson, by John Ely Austin Stoffle threw no light yesterday on why Stoffle, 20-year-old freshman and athlete at Western Maryland College, shot and killed himself Monday night.

The youth's body was found in a barn on his father's farm between Manchester and Miller Station, Carroll county. Two notes also were found, the one addressed to the youth's parents and the other to Miss Gebhardt. The two letters, it was found yesterday, were almost identical.

STOCK REPORT

(By Associated Press.)

New York, Jan. 7.—Prices followed an upward course at the opening of today's market with buying activity most pronounced in copper and motor issues. Baldwin was the only outstanding exception to the higher trend. Pool operators prosecuted their campaign for higher prices with considerable energy following the reduction in the rate for call loans to four per cent. Equipments were in brisk demand with the general list giving evidence of considerable reinvestment in the buying of high grade railroad and industrial stocks.

CONFEREES ARE EAGER FOR PEACE

Operators and Miners Are Deadlocked But Refuse to Adjourn; Settlement Is Necessary.

(By Associated Press.)

New York, Jan. 7.—Uncompromisingly opposed to any proposition offered by either side, the anthracite miners and operators, deadlocked in their efforts to end the hard coal strike, still continued negotiations today.

After each side had placed itself on record for and against various plans to send the 158,000 men back to work the six miners and six operators taking part in the parley came to the end of the road, but professed willingness to go on if there was anything to consider.

There were no smiles as the conferees filed out of the meeting room.

When the table was cleared yesterday of all the principal matters in controversy the operators announced their willingness to continue the session. President John L. Lewis, of the mine workers, said the miners also were willing to remain in the conference and that he would regard a break-up without an agreement as a public calamity.

Urges Higher Rates For Newspaper Ads.

New York, Jan. 7.—Asserting that existing advertising rates are too low, Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times, told advertising men at a luncheon of the Advertising Club that every issue of the Times cost the owners $50,000, or approximately fourteen cents a copy.

Mr. Ochs said that the present advertising rates tend to cheapen the newspapers, and expressed the belief that higher rates would improve the content of advertisements because advertisers would improve their advertising. He suggested that advertisers should spend 90 per cent of their appropriations in keeping existing customers, while 10 per cent should be used in getting new customers.

Fixes Legal Time For Real Sundays

(By Associated Press.)

Clearwater, Florida, Jan. 7.—Sunday in Florida lasts only from sunrise to sunset and picture shows operating before sunrise and after sunset are within their legal rights.

This fact was brought to light by Judge John Bird, defending a picture show owner, who was charged with having violated the Sunday law. He recalled that the Supreme Court of Florida had made this ruling on the official Sunday based on common law and there was no statutory law to the contrary.

The owner who has been operating his show on Sunday nights was acquitted.

Duro Company To Have York Office

Local friends of F. M. Booker, York, are congratulating him upon his promotion to the managership of the branch office and warehouse just established in York by the Duro Pump & Mfg. Co., of Dayton, Ohio.

The Duro company is the world's largest manufacturers of water systems and water softeners for residence and farm use. The fact that this concern has established a factory branch in this territory is evidence of the confidence they have in the rapid growth of this section of Pennsylvania. Mr. Booker is well known locally and his promotion is a well-deserved reward for his splendid service to Duro customers in this vicinity.

Fear Of Failing In Exam Prompts Leaving, Police

(By Associated Press.)

Philadelphia, Jan. 7.—Fear that he would fail in an examination scheduled for today is believed by police to have caused the disappearance of Joseph Schwait, Temple University student, who has been missing two days. Authorities doubt that he was kidnapped and beaten by two men as he had informed his mother on a post card mailed the day of his disappearance. Inquiry at the university disclosed that Schwait had not received a passing mark in organic chemistry. According to the dean he had been reprimanded for his work and the examination in the same subject was scheduled for today.

Diamond Necklace Is Wedding Gift For Second Time

(By Associated Press.)

New York, Jan. 7.—A necklace of large square cut diamonds alternating with clusters in rose design was a wedding gift in the Vanderbilt family for the second time today.

It was the gift of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt to her daughter, Consuelo, whose marriage to Earl E. T. Smith was set for this afternoon. Mrs. Vanderbilt herself received it as a gift 27 years ago when as Virginia Fair, daughter of James G. Fair, one time a United States Senator from Nevada, she married Mr. Vanderbilt.

A Fair and Friendly Warning To The Public

Rubber Footwear Will Advance 15 to 25 Per Cent (the exact percentage is not yet known) on January 1st.

This means that, as soon as we have to buy again after January 1, the retail prices will have to advance. There has been no advance on rubber footwear for a year, and if you are acquainted with the advances on tires, tubes and other rubber merchandise, you will realize that a rather heavy advance will come on rubber footwear. If you are going to need new rubber footwear for this winter, buy it now.

Rail Head And Employes Back Labor Agreement

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, Jan. 7.—President Coolidge was assured today that both the railroad executives and the employes' unions would stand behind the agreement recently reached at Chicago on a new method of settling railroad labor disputes. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, called at the White House after the president had conferred with a delegation of employes.

INSTALLMENT 25

On the last night of Tweedledee's life far out in the country a solitary figure was walking along a tiny path. At either side tall pines stretched their bristling arms above the traveler as though to hide him from the curious moon, while before him in the distance, glistening through a maze of tree-trunks, lay a sheet of sparkling silver—a luminous lake beneath the stars.

For many nights "Echo" had wandered through the fields, as happy as the wind at play, following his fitful fancy, dancing in the moonlight, singing in the forest, chasing each stealthy shadow to the skirts of Mother Sorrow, where all such gloomy children should remain. But in the daytime he was careful not to sing, dance or shout, for on his shoulder was a little wooden demon—a little wooden demon that whispered in his ear and told him what to do. And he was careful not to disobey it—not to brave the bright sunshine and the passing people, not to look into the eyes of man—for it was his brain that thus commanded, and by obeying he felt the dark domain of reason—the domain of Tweedledee—quite vanish at the touch of the rising moon.

Yes, when Nature nightly painted that pale portrait in the sky, he was free—free to follow the dancing fireflies through the bright and dewy bushes, through the multitude of tree-trunks. And it was at these times that the little wooden demon on his shoulder—the little wooden demon with legs like a goat and the face of an old man—fell fast asleep. It was useless to ask it questions, for it would not answer, no, not until the Morning entered through Her fiery gates.

Suddenly the moon broke through the clouds.

The fantastic figure began to bound forward along the little moonlit path—the path between the long rows of silent pine-trees which seemed to join hands above it like children in a childish game. Larger and brighter grew the disc of silver, till now the wild, disheveled traveler could see the great stars, like jewels, resting on its bosom. A moment more and he had broken through the clinging bushes—bushes that with tiny terror-stricken fingers sought to hold him back. Soon he was lying on the grass, looking out over the expanse of water. Not a breath of air caused a ripple on that peaceful surface; not a branch murmured overhead. The tiny lake at this moment—from some great height—must have looked like a drop of dew glistening on a shadowy leaf.

"Echo" lifted his face toward the sky, and it was as beautiful in the pale moonlight as the face of your own joyous youth. Then he pulled himself slowly forward till his shoulders were over the bank. He fixed his large luminous eyes on the black, silent water beneath. As he stared down trying to pierce the shadows the little wooden demon could be seen nodding on his shoulder. Evidently it had fallen fast asleep.

For some time he lay motionless in the soft grass, till finally the moon rising over the tree-tops seemed floating like a golden goblet on the surface of the water beneath his eyes. Then, very slowly and cautiously, a thin, shadowy arm reached out above this disc of steady light: groping, nervous fingers tried to seize it, but could not quite reach the glittering prize. The fantastic figure writhed forward like a snake, and again the long arm shot out.

For a moment it hovered above its fancied treasure and then plunged down with a splash of snow-white foam. There came a loud, frenzied cry, a cry that seemed echoed by a host of brothers—brothers hiding in the forest, in the tree-tops, in the valleys—and something long and black rolled off the bank, something that turned the water into gleaming patches of light.

Once more a thin, shadowy arm appeared, an arm that this time seemed grasping at the sky. Soon it disappeared and the foam and tiny waves changed to ripples—that ripples that the moon danced on like a silver boat. In turn these ripples subsides slowly, and the silver boat became a pale and agitated face—a face of many lines and wrinkles—the face of age and grief.

A moment later these lines and wrinkles were erased by the soothing hand of Time. And if another traveler had stood upon the bank looking down he would have seen nothing in this pale, floating face beneath him—nothing of what had gone before.

One beautiful night in August two figures might have been seen strolling leisurely across a shadowy lawn. Behind them was a large white house, brightly lighted; before them a little silver lake of flashing waves; above them a sky of fleecy clouds and flickering stars.

As they drew nearer the lake—now in light and now in shadow, like the personification of two united lives—it was evident that one was a young man in the early twenties and the other a girl of barely nineteen.

Now they had reached the board walk which extended out over the water for perhaps twenty yards. Here it ended in a little bridge—a bridge that connected it with a large float. The top of this float was scarcely a foot above the lake, and at every wave it rocked slightly with an easy, soothing motion. Here two chairs were placed, so that they looked out at the glittering hosts of tiny moonbeams riding on the ripples, at the dark, silent army of pine trees on the opposite bank.

The man and the girl advanced slowly along the wooden walk. Soon they reached the sloping bridge and, descending it, sat down in the chairs. For a moment there was silence—a silence broken only by the wind humming through the pine trees, the waves lapping against the float and the creaking of a loose board. For a moment there was silence—a silence broken only by the wind humming through the pine trees, the waves lapping against the float, and the creaking of a loose board. Finally it was the girl who spoke.

"Do you like father's new place, Hector?" she asked.

"Like it!" cried the young man enthusiastically. "Why, I think it's the most beautiful place that I've ever seen. You can't imagine, Dorothy, how wonderful it seems after what I've been through."

"It must have been terrible, Hector! I know that it was terrible for me just knowing that you were there."

"Yes," said McDonald thoughtfully, "and yet I'm glad I went through it. I don't mean because it made my stories acceptable to the magazines—no, it isn't that. It's because it has made me enjoy life so much more. Life is only very precious when one's in danger of losing it, Dorothy. God creates joy and sorrow in this world by contrast. I learned a lot in prison."

"What, for instance, Hector?"

"Well," said the young man slowly, "I learned about myself for one thing. Before I went to jail I considered myself a genius—a man above all others in my profession. You see, being so much alone I had deluded myself with that idea for months. The germ of ego grows in the garden of solitude till sometimes a man goes mad. It is only by encountering others that we can gauge our strength. But I encountered Death, Dorothy—a grisly monster who devours millions of egoes as he has devoured mine."

"How was that, Hector?"

"Well, at first when I thought that I could prove my innocence I was more egotistical than ever. That was my supreme height of madness, as those newspaper articles show. But finally a shadow fell across my mind—a shadow that grew larger day by day. At last I knew this shadow to be Death. And then it seemed that my soul was stripped bare, that I could see it as plainly as though it were lying in my open hand. I read my work as through another man's eyes, and I realized for the first time that it was commonplace. Perhaps it was as good as the average, but still very commonplace—not work that merited the sacrifice of life, the sacrifice that I had to pay. And when I knew this it was terrible, Dorothy! It semed to me that I had starved for nothing; that I was about to die for nothing. I was like some fanatic tied to the stake who at the last moment loses his faith."

"That must have been terrible, Hector," said Dorothy, with her dark eyes fixed on the young man's face. "But you do write wonderfully."

"Women fan the flame only to quench it with their tears," said McDonald. "I grant you this, though, I do write as well as the average. But Dorothy I hadn't really lived because I hadn't really suffered. Of course I had been hungry now and then, but I had never really suffered with the mind. That's what makes us or breaks us. For instance, Tweedledee's written confessions—the book that saved my life, Dorothy. Well, one page of that is worth more than anything that I've ever written. And why is it? Because he's suffered; because he's lived it all—mind and body."

"Perhaps. But I hope you wouldn't be like he was, dear!"

"No, I'd never pay that price. But some day he may be taken seriously by the world."

"How is Mr. Evans, Hector?"

"Jim? You should see him now! He goes about with his head up in the air and never says a word about where his information came from at the trial. 'Legal Inspiration,' I believe he calls it when they ask him. Mrs. O'Grady never got any credit for it."

"But Hector, what became of 'Echo'? Didn't they ever find him?".

"No, and I hope they never will. He's probably out in the country somewhere playing like a child, dancing along with the wind and chasing the wandering shadows home. He's told me what he wanted to do many a time. We had many a long talk together, he and I. God bless 'Echo,' wherever he may be."

For some time they were silent, looking out over the silver water and listening to the tiny waves lapping against the dock. Suddenly the moon, like a huge silver beetle, broke through a spider-web of clouds and, rising higher in the sky, looked down on the lake at its feet. Stretching out from the float was a narrow path of gleaming light, like a giant's mailed arm, and on this luminous path, dancing toward them, riding on the crest of each tiny wave, was a dark object no larger than one's hand. Turning, twisting, bobbing up and down, it advanced ever nearer at the touch of the breeze.

McDonald rose to his feet. "Dorothy," said he, "the waters are bringing us something. Perhaps it's a peace offering from the demon of the deep."

He advanced to the edge of the float and knelt on the damp boards. Leaning forward quickly, he pulled the little dark object out of the agitated water. For a moment he held it in his hands, examining it carefully by the light of the moon.

"I was right!" he cried at last. "This will bring us luck! I've never seen anything like it before. Perhaps it's the familiar demon that watches over our lives—the demon that protects us in our hours of danger and guards us in our hours of sleep. Perhaps, with these little wooden fingers, he has unraveled many an ugly knot in my existence—a knot that I had never guessed was there."

As he finished speaking he walked over to the girl. He held out, in the palms of his hands, a little water soaked figure which seemed familiar to both—vaguely familiar, yet unaccountably so.

Dorothy gazed at in surprise. "It does look like a demon!" she said. "Why, it has legs like a goat and the face of an old man!"

Friday's Schedule

Lancaster at Gettysburg.
Reading at Harrisburg
Sunbury at Lebanon
York at Lock Haven
Steelton at Williamsport

The Maroon and White quintet faces another stiff task on Friday night when they lock horns with the Red Tornado of Lancaster on the hotel floor, in another league game. Lancaster, making its first appearance as a member of the league, lived up to their name last Saturday when they whirled to a 34-12 victory over Steelton, on Steelton's floor.

On Monday night the high school boys had a holiday. Tuesday saw the boys resuming practice with a long scrimmage. Coach Reynolds was so pleased with the work of the combination that worked so well in the last half against Washington Central, that he is keeping this combination intact.

On Friday, Lightner will be seen at center, Utz and Buohl, forwards; with Weikert and Bream, guards. This team has been going fine in practice this week and they hope to win their first league game tomorrow night.

Probably the game the outcome of which will be watched with most interest will be the game between Reading and Tech at Harrisburg. Both of these teams are recognized as the two most formidable contenders for league honors and the result of this game will mean much to either team.

As a preliminary game to the Lancaster-Gettysburg tilt the Lancaster scrubs will meet the local scrubs at 7:00 o'clock.

LAW AMENDMENT URGED

Philadelphia, Jan. 7.—Amendment of the miners certificate law called "the very crux of the anthracite situation" was urged by Philadelphia business leaders in a letter sent today to Governor Pinchot.

17,156 TREES

planting needs can be met in all parts of the state. Recently the Miller farm between Sunbury and Milton was purchased for the purpose of developing a large central nursery. When this nursery is in full operation the annual output of the nurseries operated by the Department of Forests and Waters will be about 20,000,000 trees.

A larger number of trees would have been planted in the past few years if the nurseries had been able to supply all demands. In spite of the nursery shortage the total output during the year was 9,181,108 trees, of which 8,753,090 were planted last spring and 428,018 this fall.

Large Increase

The number of trees planted during 1925 is more than seventy times greater than the total number of trees planted ten years ago. The growth of forest tree planting by private owners of forest land during the last 16 years is shown in the following table

Year	Number of Trees Planted
1910	66,374
1911	25,360
1912	66,854
1913	47,770
1914	108,685
1915	115,577
1916	1,471,875
1917	1,812,997
1918	2,186,899
1919	3,139,531
1920	2,543,374
1921	3,041,710
1922	3,670,621
1923	5,437,817
1924	8,577,464
1925	8,604,091
Total	40,916,999

A conservative estimate shows that the 8,604,091 trees set out by private planters during 1925 will reforest approximately 8,600 acres of idle land, and when these trees reach maturity they will produce over 300,000,000 board feet of lumber which is now needed urgently by the people and industries of the state.

ELECTIONS WILL BE HELD IN MANY COUNTIES SOON

Special Elections Have Preceded Every Extraordinary Session of Legislature.

Harrisburg.—Special elections to fill vacancies in the Legislature, of which five will be held in preparation for the extra session called for January 13, have occurred before each of the special sessions, held since the adoption of the Constitution of 1873. The extraordinary session of the Senate in 1891 did not prove an exception for a new member of that body was chosen in Chester county before it convened.

When the special session of 1883 was called by Governor Pattison an election was held to fill a vacancy in the House from Franklin county. Again before the special session of 1906, called by Governor Pennypacker, nine elections were held to fill vacancies in the House and one to fill a Senatorial seat from Philadelphia. The vacancies in the House occurred in Allegheny, Crawford, Luzerne, Philadelphia, Westmoreland, York counties, Philadelphia having four places to fill. When the special session called by Governor Pinchot meets this month there will be five new members in the House, three from Allegheny and one each from Clearfield and Delaware counties.

Virtually the entire cost of special elections devolves upon the counties in which they are held and varies according to the number of precincts in a district. The only cost charged against the state is the serving of the writs issued either by the speaker of the House or president pro tempore of the Senate, depending upon the legislative branch in which the vacancies occur. The writs are served by the sergeant-at-arms of the General Assembly upon the county sheriff.

After the writ calling the election is issued nominations for the vacancies are made in accord with the party rules of the county or the district in which the vacancies occur. The nominations are certified to the state election bureau, which in turn certifies them to the county commissioners containing the districts in which the election is called for. In the meantime the county sheriff must issue a proclamation at least ten days before the election is to be held.

Upon receipt of the names of the nominees the commissioners make the same preparations as for a general election, only on a smaller scale. Both official and sample ballots must be printed, arrangement made for the polling places, election officials notified and supplies purchased. Each precinct has five election officials and the average rent for a polling place is said to be $10 a day.

After the election the returns are certified to the state election bureau, which in turn forwards them for canvass to that branch of the Assembly, in which the vacancy occurred.

OUTLOOK BRIGHT AT BLOOMSBURG

Bloomsburg. — Bloomsburg industrial plants are ending the year in a flourishing condition with bright prospects for the coming year and an optimism among workers that excels any previous year.

During the coming year, the Magee Carpet Company will pay out a three per cent bonus on April 1 on wages earned during the first 49 weeks of this year, this in addition to a Christmas bonus of 7 per cent paid as the company terms it, as "dividends to labor." The April 1 bonus is being offered in an effort to reduce the labor turn over, since any employe leaving the company between now and April 1 loses the three per cent.

To the Editor,

Sir:

I am in receipt of your letter of December 30, addressed to the governor, with reference to rumors regarding a detour on the Lincoln Highway between York and Gettysburg.

No work is contemplated by this department at the present time that would necessitate the detouring of traffic between these points.

Very truly yours,

To the Editor,
The Gettysburg Times,
Gettysburg, Pa.
Dear Sir:

I wish to thank you most heartily for your kind letter of December 19, and for the notices you were so kind as to publish regarding my mother. The papers also came to hand and I shall carefully preserve them.

A lette has come to me since the notice was published in your paper from a descendant of the Gilbert family at Mercersburg and we may learn more of our family through that source.

The head of our immediate family seems to have been Jacob Gilbert, a farmer, who lived a few miles from your city. He was twice married. Had one son, Barney or Bernard, by his first wife, and some twelve children by his second. The names of the latter, as my mother gave them to me, and the dates of birth are:

Susan or Susannah, January 15, 1786, married a Barney Gilbert, said to have been a county officer in Adams county; family later removed to Tennessee.

Magdalena Gilbert, January 5, 1788. No further record.

Catherine Gilbert, March 29, 1790, said to have married a man named Beecher, or Beeker, who had a tannery.

Elizabeth Gilbert, February 17, 1792. Said to have married a man named Saltzgiver. Lived and died in Adams county. Said to have had two sons and one daughter.

John Gilbert, November 6, 1794. Said to have removed to some place in northern Ohio.

Anna Mary Gilbert, April 26, 1797. No further record.

Jacob Gilbert, March 16, 1799. Supposed to have died somewhere in Ohio Mother thought he had two sons, Frank and George.

Sarah Gilbert, February 14, 1801. Married Daniel Herr, of Philadelphia, later of Harrisburg. Hotel keeper. Had a number of children. One was a lawyer.

George Gilbert, April 28, 1803. Coach maker at Gettysburg. Removed to Dayton, Ohio, and died there October 14, 1876. Father of Mrs. Whitmore.

Sophia Gilbert, February 20, 1806. Married man named Harmon.

Samuel Gilbert, March 23, 1808. Died at Gettysburg.

Henry Gilbert, December 20, 1812. No record.

Barney Gilbert, the son of the first marriage, also removed to Dayton, Ohio.

George Gilbert married Elizabeth Evans, a native of Wales, at Gettysburg, on October 12, 1826.

I should like very much to know the ancestry of Jacob Gilbert.

Yours truly,
HOWARD J. WHITMORE.

TO A FRIEND

When I shall run my fortune through
To balance life's long bank account
I shall not, as the misers do,
In money seek some large amount,
But I shall claim those treasures which
Such sordid souls can't comprehend.
In countless ways God made me rich!
It was my luck to be your friend!
Some there must be with wealth and fame
To boast their selfish, paltry deeds,
But I shall say 'twas mine to claim
A privilege man sorely needs.
A gentler blessing God bestowed
On me unto the journey's end,
To share the burden and the road,
It was my luck to be your friend.

Brave, gentle soul, my life has run
Through kindly channels and serene.
In all that I have ever done
I've had your strength on which to lean.
In that I'm richer far than they
Who have but yellow gold to spend,
For I can proudly boast today
It was my luck to be your friend.

TODAY'S TALK

An Editorial By
GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

GRAND JUROR NUMBER SIX

THIS has been my title for the past month and more. I have been glad to serve. I have learned a great deal about people that I never knew before. I have learned about the workings of the minds, among other things.

I have learned that these idle minds get into trouble and cause no end of trouble to other people, especially to the Federal Government which gives them protection when they need it.

I heard a man say the other day that he didn't register or vote for fear he would be called for jury service. But the man will be the first to call an officer of the law if any one steps on his weak toes, or tries to interfere with his business, or breaks into his home.

The Federal Judge who addressed us after we were sworn in for duty gave us a very "fatherly" talk and I had a greater respect than ever for these men who give their great talents to the Government for small pay—pay that is far below their ability to earn.

I used to think that the Federal Grand Jury was an antiquated affair. I think so no longer. I believe that it is a good thing. Twenty-three men give their time and demand great care in the preparation of a case before they are willing to indict a person. I have been impressed with the attitude of my associates on the Grand Jury who have demanded facts, not merely heresay, and who have sought to help, rather than to injure that priceless thing we call reputation.

I feel that I am a much better citizen since I became "Juror Number Six."

I know that I have learned many things that are valuable to me in my business and in my personal life.

A juror really renders service to his fellow man. Can a man give anything better? There is much that is defective in our government and in those who administer it, but there is much that is more defective in the ordinary citizen, especially when he seeks to shirk his opportunity to serve in a minor way such as jury service.

People who serve in this world have few axes to grind.

FAT STEER EATS HORSE BLANKET

Cheats Owner Who Bought It For Winter Beef; Arendtsville Woman 95 Years Old.

William Pitzer, of Arendtsville, recently purchased a nice, fat steer which he planned to kill for his winter supply of beef. The animal chewed up and swallowed part of a horse-blanket and its death resulted soon afterward. Mr. Pitzer paid $72 for the animal.

Mrs. William H. Coe, of Arendtsville, celebrated her 95th birthday anniversary last week. She is still able to be about and "looks 25 years younger" her host of friends say.

George Heckenluber, of Arendtsville, who spent the last two weeks at the Annie M. Warner hospital, Gettysburg, has returned home much improved.

Arendtsville Personals

Jesse, Samuel and Paul Lady, of near Abilene, Kansas, were visitors in the home of E. C. Stover New Year's Day. The brothers are attending school at Grantham.

Miss Lola Wireman, of Philadelphia, visited at the home of her mother, Mrs. Effa Wireman, over Christmas.

3000 Brands Of Feeding Stuffs Registered, 1925

A 240-page report, covering in detail the work of feeding stuffs inspection during 1924, and showing the analyses of the various brands, has been issued by the Bureau of Foods and Chemistry, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

The report shows also that over 3,000 brands of feeding stuffs were registered with the state in 1925 up to April 1. A complete list, giving the name and manufacturer of each brand, is carried in the report.

One of the most encouraging features shown by the inspection work is that manufacturers, importers and jobbers are using more care in labeling and guaranteeing the product. This development assures farmers more than ever before that they can rely upon the label as a guide in making purchases.

In the close check-up on feeding stuffs sold in Pennsylvania, 1,061 official samples were collected throughout the state, representing the output of 312 different manufacturers, jobbers and importers. While deficiencies were found in a number of the feeding stuffs, the quality of the product offered for sale is generally as indicated on the label, states James W. Kellogg, chief chemist and director of the bureau.

He's Watchdog of U. S. Treasury

Comptroller General Has an Important Position

"WHERE aren't enough dollars on earth to pay expenses if every person can say just how the government is to be run."

This is the reply of Comptroller General J. Raymond McCarl to those who criticize him for insisting that it shall be run, so far as spending is concerned, only as Congress says. They say he is pickayunish, dictatorial and not a good fellow. He certainly is the stubbornest and most literal watchdog the treasury ever had.

The act creating his office said he should "settle and adjust all claims against the United States." This means that without his O. K., money shall not be taken from the treasury. It makes him the nearest to an unlimited monarch in American history. Those who want money spent contrary to his rulings may do three things:

May Wait 10 Years

They may go to court, but so far not one cent has been paid out by court order setting aside his decisions. Or they may obtain a new act of Congress specifically authorizing the payment—just have a bill passed, that's all. Or they may wait until July 1, 1936, when McCarl's 15-year term of office will expire.

J. R. McCARL

Just now his office is auditing claims of the Sioux Indians under old treaties for a total of $222,000,000, with interest on portions since 1855.

"I really don't have much fun out of this job," McCarl admits. "I think sometimes it should be given to a sour old grouch, who would enjoy contradicting people. The one on this job can't be a 'yes-man.' He must be a 'no-man.'

"Keeping our tempers is a constant task in this office. No matter how exasperated claimants may get or how they rail at us, it still is our business to give them exactly what they are entitled to and no less.

Upholding Control

"If there's any satisfaction in this office, it is not in being what they call a czar," says McCarl. "It is in performing an actual and greatly needed service to this country.

"It is in upholding the control of Congress over expenditures as the constitution intends. The depredations upon the treasury are not made by crooks and thieves, but by men with perfectly good intentions who just carelessly and affably let questionable things slip by."

Pants Narrower, Shoulders Broader

Cincinnati, Jan. 7.—The demand of young men for broad-shouldered coats with the front suppressed to provide a more athletic appearance was recognized by the style-forecast committee of the International Association of Clothing Designers Wednesday in predicting next spring and summer styles.

Showing of suits for next season will give prominence to broad shoulders, two-button sack coats of medium form fit and smaller waists and hips, the committee forecast revealed. Trousers also will be narrower.

Freed Of Murder At 6-Hour Trial

Philadelphia, Jan. 7.—A new record for swiftness in murder trials here was set yesterday when Miss Helen Schultz, 18-year-old unwedded mother, was acquitted of murdering Edward Listers, Jr., 31, whom she shot to death, October 27, after he had refused to marry her. Approximately six hours after court opened this morning the jury had been empanelled, the witnesses heard, the prosecution and defense completed and a verdict rendered. The jury deliberated forty minutes.

As the verdict was announced the girl displayed the first emotion by springing from her chair, rushing to an ante-room where friends and relatives awaited her, and there folded her ten months old daughter to her breast with the exclamation, "Gloria, I've come back to you!"

Bell's Estate To Be Sold At Auction

Pittsburgh, Jan. 7.—The John A. Bell estate, including the Bell homestead in Carnegie, where two of his banks failed, will be sold at auction February 16. The date was fixed today by Watson B. Adair, referee in bankruptcy, in the bankruptcy proceedings against Bell.

Bell, who was convicted of embezzlement last month, sat before the bankruptcy referee with head bowed. Attorneys for the creditors declared an attempt would be made to gain possession of the Bell stock farm at Coraopolis Heights, on which Bell spent $500,000. Bell transferred this stock farm to his son, John A. Bell, Jr., several years ago.

Governor Asked To Remove Juvenile Judge

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 7.—A public petition, asking for removal of Juvenile Court Judge Leon R. Yourtee, by Governor Ritchie, was circulated Tuesday, following alleged disorderly conduct by Judge Yourtee. The judge on Saturday night visited the office where Miss Grace Baker, for whom he is guardian, is employed, and demanded he be admitted after Miss Baker locked the doors. A large crowd collected and the police sent Judge Yourtee home in an automobile.

Several months ago Judge Yourtee was acquitted by Justice Bower of driving an automobile while intoxicated. Judge Yourtee said his mind was a blank on what took place Saturday night, and added that upon advice of physicians he would go to a Baltimore hospital for treatment.

Don't Get Up Nights
John Lumpkins, Dayton, Ohio, says: "Come to 7 Carrie St., and I will show you 25 pieces of gravel that passed after taking Lithiated Buchu (Keller Formula). Had to get up 15 times at night for two years. Alright Now." Lithiated Buchu cleanses the bladder like Epsom Salts do the bowels, thereby relieving irritation, driving out foreign matter and neutralizing excessive acids. These are the causes of unnatural action of the bladder at night. Iithiated Buchu (Keller Formula) is not a cheap medicine. The tablets cost 2 cents each. Sold at leading drug stores or Keller Laboratory, Mechanicsburg, Ohio. Locally at People's Drug Store.—adv.

Must Appoint New Mont Alto Burgess

One of the first duties the new judge of Franklin county will have to deal with is the appointment of a burgess for Mont Alto, Dr. W. H. Brosius, elected by a two to one vote to that office at the November elections over his opponent, R. L. Shank, failing to qualify for the office since he is postmaster and the borough code states he is not eligible.

Dr. Brosius is in accord with the movement which is in the hands of the borough solicitor, E. C. Wingert, and it is expected that by next Monday Judge Davison will have acted upon the petition to appoint a burgess and the organization of the council at Mont Alto can be accomplished.
